

Environmental

Stoll Berne attorneys are experienced in representing individuals, public entities, and classes in complex environmental litigation. We have worked on issues ranging from mass environmental torts to consumer products contamination, and state and federal natural resource damage recovery. We bring our unparalleled expertise in complex and class action litigation to every matter, allowing us to provide high-quality environmental representation to disputes on a local and regional level. Outside of litigation, we help clients navigate the complex state and federal regulatory framework of environmental law, including with respect to wetlands permitting, environmental enforcement, surface and groundwater quality and supply, and code compliance.

Our Environmental Work is Built on Expertise in Complex Civil Litigation
