

Tyvoll vs. Acarregui

In a securities fraud lawsuit, the firm represented a client alleging that an accountant had improperly used her confidential information to recruit her to invest in a failed real estate venture. Josh Ross successfully negotiated a settlement for the client. Years later, in part based on facts established through litigation, the accountant was the target of a regulatory action which ultimately resulted in revocation of his license.